So, the real issue is not our physical defense per se, but the use of violence in our physical defense. Can one country use violence against another without violating the most basic principles of ethics, morality and righteousness? The ethics of using violence in any conflict are grounded in the culture of the people involved.

One professional example of ethics conflicting with morals is the work of a defense attorney. A lawyer's morals may tell her that murder is reprehensible and that murderers should be punished, but her ethics as a professional lawyer, require her to defend her client to the best of her abilities, even if she knows that the client is guilty.. Another example can be found in the medical field.

Ethics vs Morals - Difference and Comparison | Diffeen

As morals are framed and designed by the group, there is no option to think and choose; the individual can either accept or reject. Conversely, the people are free to think and choose the principles of his life in ethics. Morals may vary from society to society and culture to culture.

Difference Between Morals and Ethics (with Examples and ...

Like the productivist argument, the extractivist argument hinges on an empirical claim about consumer benefits and a moral claim about the ethics of so benefiting. The notion of benefiting, however, is obscure. Imagine you go to Chef in Shackles, have a truly repulsive meal, and become violently ill afterwards. Have you benefited from wrongdoing?
