Freekeh or farik is a cereal food made from green durum wheat that is roasted and rubbed to create its flavour. It is an ancient dish derived from Levantine and North African cuisines, remaining popular in many countries of the eastern Mediterranean Basin where durum wheat originated. The wheat is harvested while the grains are green and the seeds are still soft; it is then piled and sun-dried. The piles are carefully set on fire so only the straw and chaff burn. Under these conditions, the high

Green Wheat is a bakery that I frequent on a practically weekly basis. The location is a bit difficult to find, but it's well worth it. As with all Asian bakeries in the area, the bread is baked fresh daily. The pricing is extremely good. There's also a Yelp deal for complimentary iced milk tea, which tastes like the Hong Kong milk tea.
